Good News! The UU Chamber Choir to Perform its 5th Annual Holiday Concert

In what is surely now a holiday tradition, the Chamber Choir will perform at our Thursday, December 7, luncheon. Our continuing members are familiar with this outstanding choir and inspiring conductor, Barlow Bradford. They know, for instance, that in 2014 the Chamber Choir won first place in the Florilege Vocal Tours in France. For more information about the choir please see their web page: https://music.utah.edu/ensembles/choirs/chamber-choir.php

Jack Newell

Raising money did not come naturally to me when I agreed to help restore the vitality of Deep Springs College in 1995 as the College's president. In fact, I blanched at the thought. Who was I to suggest someone else should give, even sacrifice greatly, for this cause? Sensing my conflict, Chuck Thompson, a veteran of such work, counseled me: "Jack, you will do older alumni a favor if you can enlist them in this cause. He went on: "They have been movers and shakers, but in retirement many miss their engagement in significant work. Invite our senior alumni to give of themselves or of their substance -- even to the point of stretching -- and they will invariably thank you!"

Emeriti Club Dues

Quite a few emeriti have already paid their dues for the academic year, and we thank you very much. For those who have not paid dues, we ask you to consider this way of supporting all the Emeriti Club does. Dues are voluntary (no one is removed from club rolls). However, dues help offset luncheon and some ticket costs, plus aid in a variety of efforts to keep everyone informed. On page 7 the form for luncheon reservations includes a line to make your voluntary dues contribution of $12 single or $24 couples and partners.

Emeriti in Action

Professor Emeritus Jan Brunvand (English) wrote to tell us about his recent “fishy” accomplishments:

I published an article titled “On Lunkers, Tiddlers, and Other Terms for Big and Little Fish,” in The American Fly Fisher; Journal of the American Museum of Fly Fishing (Summer 2017, vol. 43, no. 3), pp. 2-5. The most interesting term I found in the classic angling literature was “dandiprat,” an old word once used for “a small, insignificant, or contemptible fellow,” according to the Oxford English Dictionary.

I completed the Utah Cutthroat Slam, a challenge issued by the Department of Wildlife Resources to catch one each of the four varieties of cutthroat trout found in Utah. Some 200+ individuals have so far completed the slam as reported on the DWR web site. I caught my Bonneville Cutthroat in Mill Creek, my Colorado River Cutthroat in Pine Creek on Boulder Mountain, my Bear River Cutthroat in the Logan River, and my Yellowstone Cutthroat in One Mile Creek in the Raft River Mountains. All were caught with a fly rod, and they were released after being photographed. For completing the slam I received a certificate and a medal.

I turned first to Bruce Laverty, a retired engineer who had supervised the construction of the nuclear power plant at San Onofre for Southern California Edison. I needed a knowledgeable volunteer (we were strapped) to help me oversee the replacement or reconstruction of key campus buildings. Bruce said "Yes," but quickly cautioned me that he lived nearly 300 miles from Deep Springs, was in his seventies, and could manage only a little effort. Five years later when we celebrated the completion of our capital campaign and campus rebuilding project, Bruce was the last alumnus to leave Deep Springs after the festivities. Gazing out over the beautifully restored campus with tears in his eyes, he said: "Jack, this has just been fun from the beginning. I hate to see our grand project come to an end. Thank you." Behind those words were years of his unstinting service to our effort, and (something I had not asked of him) one of the most generous financial gifts we received during the campaign.

At any age, and with whatever limitations, giving our time and talents to support of things we believe in enriches our lives. Some choose to use knowledge and skills honed during their careers, as Bruce Laverty did, while others love the challenge of learning new skills to support causes they always cared about but never had time to address. In either case, the prospect of refreshing ourselves looms as our reward.

Consider extending yourself anew to help others or make good things happen in our community. On our campus alone, the newly refurbished Utah Museum of Fine Arts welcomes new docents and offers an excellent training program to prepare them, the Natural History Museum capitalizes on hundreds of volunteers to staff projects and lead tours, and the Bennion Center stands ready to use our talents along with those of our students. Scores of other opportunities exist across campus, and many more await us downtown and around our state. Act now. See if Chuck Thompson's advice was sound. Test Bruce Laverty's experience against your own, however large or small!

Each monthly Newsletter this year will feature one service opportunity on campus under the heading "Wish to Serve? Consider This." We begin with the Lowell Bennion Community Service Center.

National Newspaper Academic Rates for Digital Editions

The New York Times has a half-price academic rate for their digital edition for students, faculty, and staff who have an .edu email address. The current offer for the basic subscription is $5 for 12 weeks and $1.88 a week ($7.52 a month) thereafter. Crosswords and home delivery are available for somewhat higher rates. For more information and to sign up, see https://www.nytimes.com/subscriptions/edu/lp8LQFK.html or google “NYT academic rate.”

The Washington Post has been free to educators with an .edu email address, but is now charging $5 a month—still an excellent bargain. If you are now subscribed for free, you must re-subscribe in January for $5 a month. For more information see https://subscribe.washingtonpost.com/acqlite/edu-offer/ or google “washington post academic rate.” You will be asked to upload an official document that includes your full name, the name of your institution, your status, and the date. Your presidential notification of emeritus status letter will satisfactorily fulfill this requirement.
